

I would like to comment regarding the proposal to lessen a current no call law in the state of Indiana. The short comment is "Keep your federal hands out of our state laws". I see no reason to have our current WORKING law watered down to a least common denominator. I have received only 1 or 2 unsolicited calls since being on the Indiana no-call list. My understanding is that the federal law being discussed will allow businesses with current relationships to call me at home - I DO NOT WANT THAT!!!! If I want to contact these businesses, I will do so. If they wish to contact me, they regularly bill me at my home, and can contact me via mail. I pay for my phone service, and I don't want unsolicited calls coming in.

If it is not clear yet, don't mess with the current state programs. If there is a wish to have a national system, more power to it, but it should in NO WAY interfere or water down the systems that are already in place.
